

Certificate of Origin

This document confirms and certifies the country of origin of products. It may be required by certain countries or by the terms of a letter of credit. Sometimes it may require local Chamber of Commerce's representative signature.

A standard document exists, but some countries have a specific form that that is required for proof of origin so products can qualify for preferential duty rates (typically when free trade agreements exist).

The United States has free trade agreements with several countries including, but not limited to Australia, Bahrain, Chile, Israel, Jordan, Morocco, Singapore, Colombia, South Korea and is a member of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), and the Central American Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA).
